

ASSOCIATE OF APPLIED SCIENCE AAS AND CERTIFICATE

Advertising and Marketing

Professionals in advertising and marketing can work in a variety of job atmospheres. They work to promote a company's products and services, or engage in creative thinking strategies to enhance sales opportunities. They may do public relations work to maintain a favorable image for their employer or client, write press releases or sponsor events. Others find employment in media relations, often creating advertisements for their company or clients. Advertising representatives primarily sell or solicit advertisements for newspapers, television, radio, websites, magazines and other media outlets. Experience, effective communication, creative thinking and teamwork are main components of job versatility and advancement.

Why study advertising and marketing?
